Mr. Harrison was wounded in the thigh, and shots were fired at others in the party.
The shot came from Mahone's vard, and many people in Petersburg believe they were fired by young Butter Mahone, son of the defeated man.
The General was arrested, however, and put under bonds to appear to-day for examination. The warrant for Mahone's arrest was sworn out by Charles Bomaine, one of the party of celebrators, but the complainant was uncertain as to who fired the shot, declaring at the police station that it was either Mahone or E. B. Berry.
The latter, who was armed with a revolver, was fixed $10 and put under $750 bonds to keep the peace.

Butler Mahone threateningly ordered them to leave, and soon after out came the General, his shotgun, his secretary, Col. As a Rogers, Perry, R. 324 Campbell and half a dozen other political friends.

Campbell carried a rifle.
